Resorts rock in the New Year

The Ridges Resort rang in 2010 with the perfect combination of class and unrestrained enchantment. The lights were dimmed just enough to still see the hopeful glow of what the New Year might bring.

For a countless many, the year was financially merciless, not to mention other natural life adversities. Yet the crowd was not going to let the hardships of 2009 get the best of them.

Frank and Bridget Rodriguez were visiting The Ridges Resort for the first time over the weekend and loved every celebratory minute of it.

"It's our 30th anniversary and we knew we wanted to be some where special," said Frank, a retired New Orleans police officer.

"Every year we go to a different site. This year my father suggested we come up here," said Bridget, an English teacher at Flowery Branch High School.

Shoney's closes; new restaurant on the way

By Charles Duncan

The restaurant with the $10 million view, Shoney's of Hiawassee, is no more as its owners prepare a new local food concept designed to have a more regional, appetizing and aesthetic appeal to customers.

It's all part of the changes that include a $250,000 facelift at Hiawassee's Ramada Inn at Lake Chatuge Lodge, Chatuge Resorts Inc. announced on Monday.

"To be honest, Shoney's has become a tired brand," owner Jimmy Allen said. "We've got a plan to freshen things up and bring in a new restaurant concept that the people of Towns County deserve and can be proud of when they visit us."

Careful not to tip his hand, Allen said that the next eating experience overlooking the pristine view of Lake Chatuge would be immaculate.

"The restaurant that we put there must be held to the highest level of standards," Allen said. "We've got a plan; it's time to freshen things up. We're retooling at the Lodge and retooling at the restaurant. We're getting ready for the next phase."

The existing restaurant will be closed for the interim as the Shoney's brand is removed, the building renovated and the new food concept brought to fruition, Allen said.

"We want to bring in something fresh and new," Allen said. "There are several different ways we can go. We've explored the franchise concepts. We're exploring our options."

"Whatever we decide, we want to deliver the best restaurant experience," he said. "We want the best for Towns County, the best for its people and the best eating experience in the region."

Steadfast during hard times

Lassie's Diner at the Towns County, Clay County, NC line on Georgia 66 was quiet on New Year's Day.

Other than the television sounds of Auburn struggling to beat Northwestern 38-35 in the Outback Bowl, the only noise to be heard was Lassie cheering on the Wildcats.

You see, Lassie Bauser loves football; she loves the underdog and in a way, she is the underdog.

The doors to Lassie's Diner opened in July in the midst of one of the greatest economic depressions this country has ever known.

She longs to open a hot bar and breakfast bar, but cold weather and unusually wet weather have kept her loyal construction customers out of work and out of the restaurant.

Most would have already raised the white flag of financial surrender. Not Lassie Bauser. In her own words, "I'm just too stubborn."

"I really believe that 2010 will be a real good year," she said. "I believe in serving good food with good service. Nothing on our menu is frozen; it's all fresh and prepared with each order."

"It's not fast food, but it's good food and it's fresh," she said. "That means a lot to folks."

Lassie was born in the North Georgia Mountains and later moved to Indiana. She married, raised a family and moved back home four years ago. Her daughter and granddaughter help her in the restaurant.

Lassie's worked in restaurants all of her adult life.

She's managed at Burger King and knows what the average Joe wants to eat as soon as they come in the door.

She won't serve food that sits under a heating light all day. She believes in cook to the order and the customer's tastes.

"We've got regulars that come in all the time, but we're also looking to attract new customers," she said. "I believe in folks leaving with a full stomach and a smile on their face."

Temptations jump start 2010

By Matthew Jarrard

Music fans packed Anderson Music Hall on Saturday where they gave into some of their very first, and best, Temptations of the New Year. The Grammy Award-winning Rock & Roll Hall of Fame inductees The Temptations brought enough energy to the Hall to warm up a small town, and they did so just as smoothly as they ever have in their 50-year career.

They started off, or rather turned on, the evening with ease as they performed the 1971 smooth melody Just My Imagination. And ready they were as the crowd dished out just as much energy as The Temptations emitted.

Gaining harmonious momentum by the second, the group of five, with Otis Williams, the only original group member remaining, continued on with the 1966 heartstring tugging, all too relatable relationship ballad Ain't Too Proud To Beg. The single ruled the Billboard R&B charts at No. 1 for two consecutive months in 1966. Judging by the crowd's reaction Saturday night, it remains to be the most powerful lovesick yet engaging song that the music world has ever heard, since its original debut.

The Temptations donned one of many signature styles as their orange and purple almost zoot suit-like apparel added flash and highlights, especially during their more serious, hard-edged and Blues inspired tune Papa Was A Rollin' Stone, which won the group three Grammy Awards in 1973. But the suits were merely an afterthought compared to their stage presence, dancing as light on their toes as if Otis Williams and Company were in the heart of Motown again.

Next they sang just the perfect song for the New Year, their 1966 hit Get Ready, an inspirational and uplifting Motown song origi-

Fla. couple rescues puppies from cold

Thanks to Hiawassee Police Officer James Harkins and a Sarasota, Fla. couple, seven young boxer-mix puppies are in the warm environment of the Mountain Shelter.

The couple found the puppies wandering in the middle of U.S. 76 on New Year's evening and couldn't just leave them in the bitter cold.

Suzanne McBrayer and Jay Jeffreys gathered up the puppies and put them in their truck.

As they drove through Downtown Hiawassee, they encountered Officer Harkins working his scheduled shift. Harkins quickly began making contacts for emergency shelter for the puppies as McBrayer and Jeffreys couldn't take the puppies home to Florida with them.

"We found the Humane Society Mountain Shelter in Blairsville," McBrayer said. "They usually have a waiting list and charge $25 per pup due to

No mercy; bitter cold will continue

By Charles Duncan
TOWNS COUNTY HERALD

If you think it was cold over the weekend, brace yourself, it's going to get colder.

Riding the wave of an Arctic Blast that has swept across the eastern United States, bitter cold continues its relentless grip on Towns County as the region remains stuck in a deep freeze.

Snow flurries fell overnight on Monday; more snow is expected on Thursday and Friday.

The National Weather Service has forecast a 40 percent chance of snow showers on Thursday; a 20 percent chance exists for Friday. With the ground frozen following continued freezing temperatures, the opportunity for significant accumulation exists.

Temperatures in the teens gripped the community over much of the weekend. Wind chill factors made Sunday night's 19 degrees feel like 9 degrees. By Monday morning, the mercury actually had dipped to 7 degrees.

If that wasn't enough, the weather service continues to warn about snow showers expected on Thursday night and throughout the day on Friday.

The mercury is expected to dip as low as 19 degrees Thursday night with single-digit wind chill factors; 10 degrees on Friday night with single-digit wind chill factors and 8 degrees by Saturday morning with the wind chill factor expected to reach below zero.

Sunday, Monday and Tuesday should feel like a heat wave with overnight temperatures ranging from 20 degrees on Sunday to 29 degrees by Tuesday.

Until then, it's going to be bitter cold, according to the National Weather Service.
