White Christmas arrives; stays here a while

By Charles Duncan
Towns County Herald
cduncan.tch@windstream.net

A very White Christmas has given way to extremely cold temperatures and wind chills throughout Northeast Georgia.

The good news: warmer temperatures are on the way.

Towns County residents got their White Christmas, the first such occurrence since experiencing a dusting in 1993. The weather system behind the historic Christmas snow was a low pressure system off the North Carolina coast. That same weather system created blizzard conditions as it crept up the Eastern Seaboard on Monday.

Locally, the system brought extreme frigid temperatures and plenty of frozen precipitation. Snowfall measurements in Towns County ranged from 7 inches to a foot in certain elevations.

Weather conditions were ideal for sledding, snowball fights, building a snowman or just cutting a doughnut in the local parking lots with a four-wheel drive. Some residents lost power, some lost cable service, and some lost both.

However, power was restored by Sunday.

The storm prompted a brief postponement of the 17th Annual Battle of the States Christmas Tournament in Hiawassee. Instead

2010: In the books; one last look

A new city councilman in Hiawassee, the return of college basketball to Towns County, a familiar winter feeling and 50-plus acres to build a recreational park dominated the headlines in 2010.

While the year is almost gone, it's appropriate to take a look back at the year that was and track the notable news stories.

The year ended as it began with snow and ice dictating the headlines. Fires and tragedy struck again as the year came to a near close.

On election night in November, voters throughout House District 8 spoke loud and clear that they were satisfied with State Rep. Stephen Allison. Statewide, voters, including those in Towns County, said yes to Nathan Deal as their new governor and yes to Republicans in general. No state office is headed by a Democrat for the next four years.

In the July Primaries, Jeff Langley was the District Attorney of choice and voters in Senate District 50 declared State Sen. Jim Butterworth worthy of a second term as the district's state senator.

Locally, the city of Hiawassee said farewell to a beloved councilman, Howard Cunningham, who retired, and welcomed Pat Smith aboard in November to fill his unexpired term.

Also, the community honored its heroes and none deserved the honor more than Hiawassee Police Chief Jimmy Wright. The chief risked life and limb to rescue fire victims Ivalee Blairsville – The State Fire Marshal's Office is investigating a suspicious fire in neighboring Union County that resulted in the death of two men, including a former member of Towns County basketball and baseball.

Chad Derek Marshall, 38, of Young Harris and 62-year-old Joseph Leroy Powell have been identified as the victims of the fire at 65 Guffey Valley Road in Blairsville, said Glenn Allen, spokesman for the State Fire Marshal's Office.

The fire was called in at 9:40 p.m. on Dec. 23rd, Allen said.

"The bodies of the victims are at the Georgia Bureau of Investigation Crime Laboratory in DeKalb County," Allen said. "The Fatal fire claims Towns man bodies were sent there, not only for identification, but also to determine the cause of death.

"The reason the state Arson Unit is investigating this, it's a very suspicious fire," Allen said. "A very suspicious fire."

The house, roped off with crime scene tape, remains a focal point of the investigation.

Sheriff urges fire safety

By Charles Duncan
TOWNS COUNTY HERALD
cduncan.tch@windstream.net

Towns County Sheriff Chris Clinton urges Towns County residents to adopt a personal fire safety plan for 2011 in the wake of recent extreme cold weather.

Fire-related tragedy occurs far too often, the sheriff said.

"There are some things that you can do to help keep yourself and your family safer," he said.

Fires in the home can start in an instant and spread in seconds, leaving families with as little as 2 minutes to escape from a residential fire. However, with smoke alarms, escape plans and good fire safety practices, two minutes is enough time for families to evacuate unharmed.

Sheriff Clinton urges the installation and maintenance of smoke detectors in each home.

"Smoke detectors can save your life, but only if they are in good working order," he said. "Maintain and test smoke detectors regularly and never remove the batteries for other uses."

Not only should smoke alarms be tested monthly, but batteries should be replaced once a year, unless the smoke alarm has a longer-lasting lithium battery.

Also, smoke alarms should be replaced every 10 years.

Another safety tip: if a smoke detector sounds while you are sleeping, roll to the floor and crawl, Sheriff Clinton said.

Sheriff Chris Clinton

"If you encounter smoke, remember the best air will be closest to the floor," he said.

The sheriff asks residents to be sure to give heaters and fireplaces plenty of space.

"Placing combustible material close to a heat source can cause it to ignite and start a fire," he said.

The sheriff also urges families to adopt an escape plan in the event of a fire.

"A good plan should include two escape routes from any room in the home," he said.

"You should designate a place to meet outside. Once out of the fire, stay out."

Bank on new deal in 2011

By Charles Duncan
Towns County Herald
cduncan.tch@windstream.net

For the seventh consecutive month the Georgia Department of Revenue has recorded an increase in tax revenues.

That's a sign of economic recovery that we've all been waiting to see and hear.

It's a sign that 2011 is about to be better than 2010 or any year since 2006. Economic recovery is a sign of the times and while jobs still lag behind, there are even signs that market is improving. Fewer jobless claims are the key indicators and its happening statewide.

Locally, the tell-tell signs of economic recovery will be a decrease in the amount of activity at the Towns County Food Pantry. Here's hoping that happens and soon.

Gov.-Elect Nathan Deal has his hands full trying to turn Georgia's economy around. However, having personally known Gov.-Elect Deal and his family for going on 18 years, I truly believe he is the man for the job.

Nathan is one of us, a true down-to-earth human being, who is likely to slap you on the back and ask you how you're doing in a crowd of strangers.
