continue to diligently perform my duties." Local incumbents joining Bradshaw in qualifying unopposed were longtime Superior Court Clerk Cecil Dye, Probate Judge David Rogers, and Board of Education Members Brandon Grimsley and Stephanie McConnell.

All of the incumbents are set to swear into new four-year terms in January 2021. Not a single Democrat or Independent qualified for the office of Towns County Sheriff – but five Republicans did, meaning that race will be settled following the May 19 General Primary, after which a single candidate will advance unchallenged to the Nov. 3 General Election.

Qualifying candidates for sheriff are Daren "Bear" Osborn, Kenneth "Ode" Henderson, Linda J. Curtis, Jim Couch and Lisa Joseph. Whoever wins the election in May will take over in January from Sheriff Chris Clinton, who announced in November that he would not seek re-election to his fourth full term in office.

Incumbent Harold Copeland and challenger Tamela Cooper, both Republicans, will square off in May for the chance to lead the office of Towns County Coroner, with the winner primed for an unchallenged victory come November. Likewise, Incumbent Bruce Rogers, a Democrat, is facing opposition from Republican J.C. Berrong for Tax Commissioner. Both men qualified unopposed with their respective parties, and their race won't be decided until the Nov. 3 General Election.

The other contested local race is that of Towns County Board of Education Post 5, for which Steve Green and Caroleen Woods have both qualified.

And since Board of Education posts are nonpartisan elective offices in Towns County, the fate of Post 5 will be decided in the concurrently running May 19 Nonpartisan General Election, with the victor being sworn in at the start of 2021.

The Post 5 BOE seat is currently being held by Dr. Kilee Smith, who decided not to seek re-election this year. At the state level, Incumbent Superior Court Judge Joy Parks of the Enotah

County on top of COVID-19 prevention, preparedness

Since December of 2019, when awareness of the new strain of coronavirus was first disseminated publicly at the height of this year's especially virulent flu season, COVID-19 has become a main topic of concern, not only in the U.S., but across the globe.

In Towns County, Sole Commissioner Cliff Bradshaw and Hiawassee Mayor Liz Ordiales are looking to Towns County Emergency Management Agency Director Brandon Walls for all things COVID-19 prevention and preparedness.

Walls gave a short presentation on COVID-19 in a special called meeting at the commissioner's office on Thursday, March 5.

"Start off with education, because that's the biggest thing," Walls said. "Coronavirus is a family of dozens of viruses that were first identified in the '50s and '60s. They're typically zoonotic diseases, meaning we typically find that virus first in animals. "Most of them don't affect humans. Historically, there wasn't a lot of work into studying coronaviruses or developing vaccines because the ones that did affect humans were very mild. "Everybody in this room has had a coronavirus infection at some point in their life. If you've ever had a small cold, sniffles, runny nose, it was likely a coronavirus infection. "The one in question is COVID-19, which stands for coronavirus disease 2019, because it was first detected, of course, in China in the year 2019 during an outbreak in Wuhan City.

"COVID-19 seems to be a little different in that it's moving a little faster and is a little more severe in terms of symptoms," Walls continued. "The big thing – we're only several months into this. Even in China, we don't have a big See COVID-19, Page 6A
