tion since 2008. "I am an artist from Florida, with a home in North Carolina, and I love to travel. I am a signature member of the Watercolor Society of North Carolina and have participated in many juried shows in Florida, Georgia and North Carolina," said Fullerton. She was well represented with three beautiful watercolor paintings Dock of the Bay, Relax, and Istanbul.

This exhibit will be on display in the Gallery at Brass-town from March 22nd through July 8th. All of the art work is available for purchase and would make a lovely addition to any home or office. In the first round performance, Walsingham walked out confidently and went right into a beautiful and flawless rendition of A Thousand Miles. She took control of the stage and had the audience completely amazed as she sang with great feeling and confidence.

recording session and third-place winner Kaylee King won a one song demo song recording session. All prizes were compliments of C & C Media. It was a win-win situation all the way around for these three talented young ladies. While the Camp sisters did not place, they are definitely forces to contend with when they return.

When she was selected as one of the five finalists to compete for the title of North Georgia Idol 2013, she didn't appear at all shaken as she walked back on stage and gave a stellar performance as she sang her own amazing version of Drops of Jupiter. She was an absolute natural on the stage and she made singing appear so effortless. She makes it look as easy and natural as speaking or breathing. Walsingham is currently attending Covenant College and is majoring in music.

"North Georgia Idol 2013 was an awesome event. I made several new friends, listened to wonderful singers, and took home the third place prize. I can't wait to come back next year and hopefully win first place," said King. It was a tough night to be sitting in the judges' seats as all five young ladies gave a great performance with their own unique style and sound. It was certainly a difficult decision for the judges. But, as in any competition, somebody has to win and, unfortunately, someone has to walk away with dreams of that win whisked away in the blink of an eye. These young ladies have all vowed to return next year and vie for the title of North Georgia Idol 2014.

"Winning North Georgia Idol, and having the opportunity to work with Sean Clyde in the recording studio is like a dream come true," she said. "Ever since I was little, singing has been a passion of mine. When I get up to perform, it's not just about singing a song, but about communicating a message," she said. "I feel the music in my heart and in my soul. Singing is the only thing I can see myself doing for the rest of my life, and the thought of being able to record my own songs means so much to me. I am so thankful for the opportunity I had to be a part of North Georgia Idol," said Walsingham.

Last year's 2013 Idol winner Palmer Mireille was unable to attend this year's event as she is in Los Angeles doing photo shoots, working on her song writing, recording her original music, and working on her vocals with some very renowned vocal instructors. She did send her wishes of good luck to this year's participants via her mother Robbie Derhnel.

Walsingham was up against some pretty tough competition and this was certainly a night for talented young women as she competed against Annabell Camp, 16 of Newnan; Tatum Turner, 15 of Conyers, Kaylee King, 13 of Lagrange, and Lilly Camp, 13 of Bowden. While they didn't go home with the title of North Georgia Idol 2013, second place winner Tatum Turner won a two-song demo studio

This years judges were Keren Leppo, Marietta; Don Byers, Blairsville; Tammy Clyde, Young Harris; and Gail Lynn, Blairsville. Emcee Shad Bradley claims both Woodstock and Blairsville as his home. He did an excellent job and entertained the crowd with his quick, unique style of humor, and his ability to make the performers feel at ease on the stage.

The Shelter provides a much needed service to both Towns and Union counties, but the facility is filling up faster than money is coming in. Shelter Director Lisa McConnell wants to remind folks that spaying and neutering your pet makes it less likely to stray and "it is probably the single most important act of kindness you can show your pet."

The Shelter also appreciates local support of their fundraisers. McConnell encourages Towns and Union residents to come out and support their next big fundraiser on June 15th at the Mountain Shelter from 10:30 a.m.-2:30 p.m.

"We have many animals brought in as strays or drop-offs. We try to reunite them with their owners, but many times that just isn't possible. We also get a lot of animals that are bought as 'gifts' for children. When the new wears off and they are not quite as cute, or they become more of a responsibility and expense than anticipated, they end up here, if they are lucky," said McConnell. "The Humane Society's Mountain Shelter is dedicated to preventing overpopulation, animal cruelty and suffering, and the inhumane treatment of animals," said McConnell. One of the suggestions of the HSMS is to educate children regarding the proper treatment of animals. "If we educate our children, they in turn will educate their children. We need to teach children compassion for animals, as well as the importance of humane treatment, proper care, and the need for spaying and neutering," said McConnell. The staff at the shelter would like for interested persons to know that they welcome volunteers and also appreciate any support in their fundraising efforts. Mountain Shelter operates two thrift stores, one in Blairsville and one in Young Harris off Highway 17. They appreciate your support of their thrift stores either with donations or purchases.

"We welcome everyone to our Annual Pet-A-Pet as we celebrate our 25th anniversary and open house. Come visit the shelter and pet all the animals, but please do not bring your pets with you," said McConnell. There will be continuous door prizes and educational material available. McConnell is pleased to announce that veterinarian Hilty Burr of Lake Chatuge Animal Hospital will be available for 'Ask a Vet' sessions. Union County Animal Control and the North Georgia S.P.C.A. will be on hand to answer your questions and provide educational information to area residents. "This is a huge fundraiser for the Shelter and we are very excited about it. We will have face painting, bracelet design, Dance for Dollars, and lots of more fun for the whole family. We hope to have the whole community come out and join in this fundraiser and anniversary celebration," said McConnell. Mountain Shelter is always looking for dedicated volunteers and they will offer a "volunteer sign up" for those looking for ways to serve their community. Volunteers are needed at the shelter and the thrift stores as well. Mark your calendar folks and come out and support your local shelter. You will walk away with a smile on your face and a slight skip in your step knowing that you have made the world a little brighter for a shelter pet.

U.S. Marine Corps captains Sean Gobin and Mark Silvers co-founded Warrior Hike, after returning home from Afghanistan in 2012. The two men were on a mission and totally committed to seeing Warrior Hike become an outlet for the many dedicated veterans who had served their country selflessly, had endured great hardship, witnessed great losses, and left family behind to fight to preserve the great freedoms that we have and often complain about and take for granted today. Gobin and Silvers drew their inspiration for Warrior Hike from a story they heard regarding a World War II veteran, Earl Shaffer, who, in 1948, "told a friend he was going to 'walk off the war' and four months later, he became the first person to hike the entire length of the Appalachian Trail from Georgia to Maine," said Gobin. "Recognizing the physical, psychological, and spiritual benefits of hiking the Appalachian Trail, Warrior Hike partnered with the Appalachian Trail Conservancy to create the Walk Off The War Program," said Gobin. Aimed at providing a therapeutic and holistic approach to helping veterans "walk off the war," Mother Nature assumes the role of physician, therapist, trail guide, and confidant. The warrior hikers connect with other veterans from all across the country on their own self-paced journey of self-awareness, soul searching, and striving to make sense of all they have seen, felt, lost, and sacrificed. For many veterans, the battle continues long after they have left the war and returned home. Gobin told their veteran hosts that he and Silvers hiked all 2,185 miles of the Appalachian Trail in a fundraising effort to benefit wounded veterans. During their journey, they organized numerous speaking events via the veterans' organizations they encountered during their time on the trail. "By the end of our hike, we had raised $50,000 and were able to purchase adapted vehicles for seriously wounded veterans from the war in Afghanistan," Gobin said. U.S. Army Corp. Gary Ewin, best summed The Trail experience up when he said, he never thought he could have so much fun being so miserable. Ewin was referring to the cold, wet conditions endured on The Trail. Twenty-four year U.S. Army veteran Chris Galemore said the reason he was doing this is because it gives him time to think with every step he takes. There were many more who shared this sentiment and expressed their appreciation for the opportunity to be a part of this adventure. Due to a scheduling conflict, Commissioner Kendall was unable to attend the gathering and expressed his appreciation for these veterans. "We are real proud to have this group of veterans passing through Towns County," Kendall said. "I regret that I was unable to be there to shake their hands and tell them how much we appreciate their service to this country. We certainly wish them well as they continue on the Trail." Union County Commissioner Lamar Paris, who was described by Marine Corps League member Walt Scott as "a big supporter of veterans and the Marine Corps League" was invited to take part in honoring the veterans. "I appreciate what this group is doing for veterans, past and present, and for their service to our country," Paris said. "Their effort in helping veterans transition back into civilian life after having served in a war or wars, by allowing them the opportunity to participate in the Warrior Hike is commendable," he said. "It's a very worthwhile program, and I am proud to have been invited to help honor them." The Appalachian Trail a little bit more fair this way," said Hooper. "The younger kids don't have to compete with the older ones." This was a wonderful community-building event as parents, grandparents, and other family members talked and socialized with old and new friends as they waited patiently for the opportunity to watch their kids hunt for eggs.

Six-year-old Eva Alford, with parents Judson and Lisa Alford of Hiawassee, was very excited about Saturday's event. "This is fun," said Eva. She also was eager to tell of her second place win in the Easter Drawing Contest sponsored by United Community Bank on Friday, March 29th. "I won a big Easter basket and it had a frog in it and a chocolate bunny." This was two big days in a row for this young lady and she was hoping to go home with another victory. She was not disappointed as she was not only the winner of a Grand Prize Easter Basket, but won a "regular" prize basket as well. There were a total of six recipients of the Grand Prize baskets, three from both ball fields. Winners of the Grand Prize baskets were Eva Alford, Hanna Monnin, Devin Reece, Seth Rutan, and two more anonymous children who eagerly collected their baskets and left to enjoy their tasty treats and prizes. This was a fun morning for most all of the kids, but as in any sport, you can't have this many kids on the field without a minor mishap. In this case, a young child (4-6 year age group) was accidentally knocked down and hurt his mouth. Hooper assisted his mother by providing a bottle of cold water, some paper towels, and provided a place for mom to wipe up his face. Here's hoping the Easter Bunny puts an extra helping of chocolate in that young man's basket this year. "All the eggs have an assorted candy in them, while others have winning prizes listed on slips of paper in the egg letting the kids know exactly what they have won," said Hooper. "We wanted to make sure that every kid leaves with some kind of treat." Some of the eggs even had gift certificates in them. "I want to thank McDonald's and Dairy Queen for the gift certificates they donated for the egg hunt," said Hooper. Hooper also said that there were some anonymous donations made by individuals who did not wish to be recognized, but their generosity was greatly appreciated.
