Towns County Sheriff's Deputy Aaron Deyton, who was stabbed and airlifted to Northeast Georgia Medical Center for treatment Wednesday, Oct. 1, appears to be out of immediate danger, Towns County Sheriff Chris Clinton said.

"He came through his surgery good, he's just in the process of trying to get better now," said Sheriff Clinton. 'From what I understand, the doctors feel like he's going to make a comeback.'

Deputy Deyton, who lives in Union County, was stabbed in the neck following a brief foot chase and physical confrontation with Daniel Lee Bower, 28, of Hayesville, NC, Sheriff Clinton said.

A city of Hiawassee police officer allegedly pulled Bower over on a traffic stop in the parking lot of Hiawassee's Mull Motel. The officer had assistance from two sheriff's deputies, one of which was Deputy Deyton.

Bower, who faces charges of aggravated assault on an officer during the performance of his duty, driving under the influence, seatbelt violation, and tag light requirements, was taken into custody at the scene.

Sheriff Clinton offered nothing but praise for Deputy Deyton in the wake of his lifethreatening ordeal.

"Aaron Deyton's a perfect example of everything a deputy should be -I mean, he's a real hero in my book," said Sheriff Clinton. "He goes out every shift willing to risk his life to keep people safe, and that's basically what he was doing that night, and he did everything right - nothing he could have changed, in my book. It's just, we don't get to pick when these events happen."

And Sheriff Clinton knows how hard it is to expect the unexpected.

'You can't do that, and that's why we call it that," said Sheriff Clinton. "All you can do is adapt and overcome in that situation, and that's exactly what he did. He's just a fine deputy, and it's a very real risk that a lot of times people don't think about, but that's what the guys deal with day in and

BOE sets millage rate at lower than expected rate

the investigation yet, but he is

is completed."

The Towns County Board of Education voted unanimously last Thursday to set the school system's millage rate at 7.995 versus the initial proposition of 8.495.

Originally, the board had discussed and held public hearings on an increase of 2 mills for this year's tax bills, but the set rate reflects an increase of only 1 1/2 mills.

According to the notices leading up to setting the millage rate, the school portion of Towns County taxpayers' property taxes was to increase 30.97 percent at the tentative rate increase of 2 mills. Raising the rate only 1.5 mills drops this number to a 23.26 percent increase in solely the school system's portion of property taxes

Last year, the school system levied $4,627,248 in taxes. Towns County residents a rate increase of 1 1/2 mills to 7.995, property taxes collected by the school will now be $5,703,453

If the school board had chosen to adopt the tentatively scheduled increase of 2 mills to the rate of 8.495, taxes collected would have been $6,060,142, or $356,689 more than the currently adopted rate.

This decision was based on feedback from the community, many of whom turned up for the three public hearings See BOE, Page 10

Lowell humbled by dedication

By Shawn Jarrard Towns County Herald Staff Writer

Tuesday, Sept. 30, was a special day for all who attended the Towns County Lady Indians' final regular season game of the year against Providence Christian Academy at Lowell Nicholson Field.

It was Senior Day, Head Coach Brandon Rowland's birthday, the Lady Indians won their game, and last but certainly not least, Lowell Nicholson was treated to a special dedication ceremony before the game.

"It was a special occasion for me, but I didn't deserve all that credit," said Nicholson. "It was an honor, and I give the good Lord credit for it, as he saw fit for me to have it."

That Tuesday was special for many, but it held a particular significance reserved solely for Nicholson

"Tuesday was my mom's birthday," said Nicholson,

Jerry Taylor puts historic pen to paper again for Towns

By Shawn Jarrard Towns County Herald Staff Writer

Towns County Historian Jerry Taylor of the Towns County Historical Society is enlisting the help of the community to compile the second volume of Hearthstones of Home: Foundations of Towns County, Georgia.

"The book will be a unique collection of family sketches and stories, illustrated with new and old photos," said Tavlor. "Best of all, you can help write the new book.'

Taylor invites current residents and former residents of Towns County to submit family stories and photos to be included in this second volume. He encourages anyone with roots in Towns County to enter submissions as well.

"These will be combined with church stories, military biographies and photos for the new book," said Taylor. "This is a rare second chance for those who missed out on Volume One.'

One of the main challenges, in hindsight, of compiling the first volume of Hearthstones was not having the Internet to collate data and connect with individuals far and wide.

"Volume One was family histories as we could do them at that time," said Taylor. "Volume Two is going to be more family histories, including all the original settlers, as much as I can find on them. Plus, other family histories as people will submit them about themselves, their own families, their parents, their grandparents - so, it's going to be more, bigger and better."

Hearthstones of Home will be a limited edition book, meaning it has to be ordered ahead of publication. It will be hardbound at 8 1/2 inches by 11 inches, and "exquisitely gold-stamped to match Volume One.'

The deadline for all stories, photos and book reservations is this Nov. 28.

"Each household may submit 750 words of family history and one photograph and one military history," said Taylor. "A household also means that separate ancestral families can be included, such as parents, grandparents, greatgrandparents, etc."

Taylor gives suggestions on what people can write about.

"Write the story, as you know it, of your own family and your ancestral family or families," said Taylor. "Why did they come to Towns County? Give birth, marriage and death dates, share handed-down family stories, tell about childhood, school days, old anecdotes and humorous tales and other events.

People should also include jobs, residences, pastimes and hobbies

"Anything you can pass down to future generations

Staff Writer The Towns County Citizens' Coalition of Fire Adapted Communities hosted a Firewise Super Meeting Thursday night at the Towns County Recreation Center, and the event was a who's who of wildfire prevention.

Mike Davis and Jason Demas of the U. S. Forest Service were in attendance, as well as Mark Wiles, Tony Harkins and Eric Mosley of the Georgia Forestry Commission, among others.

munities. Frank Riley, with the help of Towns County's nine-member Citizen Coalition and Coalition Chairman Billy Snipes, had invited 10 communities to attend.

That goal was met and borhoods from around Towns County attended the meeting. The initial 10 had already pledged to become Firewise Communities, and four of the eight additional communities pledged the same.

Firewise came to Towns County in 2008 after the Cedar Knob fire that burned 800 acres in Young Harris.

"Mitch Floyd and I talked about the need to be more proactive," said Fire Management Officer Davis.

The torch was passed to Frank Riley, who hit the ground running. Today, Towns County's FAC is nationally recognized as a model for similar upstart programs, and Riley is hard at work bringing Firewise to neighboring counties.

Snipes opened the meeting, speaking on the origins of the Citizens' Coalition.
